Pendle Hill

About This Walk

Barley, on the slopes of Pendle Hill (or "Pendleside" as it is known), is an ideal village from which to start a walk. There is a visitor centre (plus toilets) in the car park below the bus shelter, and the popular Pendle Inn attracts many walkers and cyclists.

Downham village is one of the most attractive in Lancashire, featuring several fine 17th and 18th century stone yeomen's houses and cottages. It also has reputedly the best-kept toilets in the whole of the county! (located in the stable block near the car park). There is a handsome church on the hillside, from where there are stunning views back towards Pendle Hill - one of the North of England's best known landmarks, rich in legend and mystery.

It is easy to while away an hour or so in Downham if waiting for a bus (generally every two hours), but if you have missed one it's less than a mile of fairly quiet lane to Chatburn village - keeping straight ahead at the cross roads, eventually over the busy A59 Clitheroe by-pass into the centre of Chatburn. Bus stops for Clitheroe (C2,280/X80) and Skipton (280/X80) are located just to the left of the road junction in the village centre.

Walk Description

★ From the bus shelter walk up through the village past Barley Mow restaurant and Meadow Bank Farm to where a path, signed the Pendle Way (look for yellow witch logo), leads off to the left. This follows a shallow valley over two footbridges, turn left onto the tarmaced lane.

⑥ Continue directly ahead to a wooden ladder stile. Cross and remain heading in the same direction over open moorland. Care is needed as you cross the brow of the hill, meeting another path, which comes in from the right before descending to a waymarked post.

sledge track. This finally turns sharp right and crosses a low, boggy area, gradually descending Downham Moor. This is all across public access land (permissive path) - the path crosses two stiles and then through a kissing gate onto the road to Downham at Lane Head.

The route into Downham is a pleasant, easy-to-follow public right of way. Go through another kissing gate directly ahead across the lane, which leads to a gravel path through newly planted trees. Ignore the tall guidepost ahead, and bear left across a little gully, over a stile, past an inviting bench, and another stile on the right. This leads into a long field. The path initially runs downhill alongside a narrow plantation to a stone stile. The hollow on the right now becomes a rocky streambed, and you follow this all the way to Downham.
